"A Day at the University of the Future"

by Eloise Rosenstein

I have a dream..

A library without queues for computers,
All student cafes serving excellent coffee,
and 2, that's right, 2 bicycles in every garage!

The students will smile at each other, acknowledge each other and know each other.
The lecturers and tutors will seem genuinely pleased to be there.
And no student will have to go a week without food to afford their textbooks for the semester..
Unless they're somewhat like me, and rack up too many library fines as well (fair is fair).

The escalators will ALWAYS WORK, and the tallest buildings won't sway in the wind.

And I'll come to uni in my pyjamas, eating peanut butter from the tub, and no one will care..

Because hey, it's uni, there are certainly better things to worry yourself with.

Like that great new band playing upstairs.

Or the new beer on tap in the bar.

Maybe even some hands-on exhibits from the science faculty (hmm, biology..)

Most importantly of all, the University of the Future will be full of students, from a wide range of backgrounds.

Everyone smiling, everyone learning, everyone enjoying life both on and off campus.

Go team Monash!
